Then he explained about the production levels of the Unibic company where they are producing 28 different flavors of cookies. There are two types of materials they use, one is raw materials and the other is packaging material. More than 100 different types of raw materials are used by the company.

And coming to the packaging material there is three types primary – which has direct contact with the cookies and protects them, secondary – which protects the primary package, tertiary- which protects both. Primary and secondary package. The next step is the quality inspection of the raw materials where they select according to their quality standards. Then these raw materials are sent to warehousing, they use forklift vehicles for loading and unloading the materials and they put them on palates. There are two types of plates one is metal and the other is wooden. The metal plate is used to put raw materials and the wooden palate is for finished goods. Materials are stored in different palates in order to avoid cross-contamination. Then they use bin cards, which represents the data of the material to identify the product and for FiFO (first in first out) purpose.

After he explaining the different production levels of the company, he explained the production process. They use hopper for mixing the dough, where all the ingredients come through the pipe and fall into the hopper. Then they use different types of conveyors to transfer the materials from place to another. Then the base material is to be shaped, they use two technologies for shaping one is wire cutting and molding. Then they'll bake the product by sending them into the oven at particular temperatures from 150 degrees to 300-degree centigrade in just 8 minutes. After backing these products will be sent into the cooler wherein gives crispy and crunch to the cookies. The next step is packaging, the main label will be pre-printed except the price, date of manufacture, date of expiry, batch number. Then automatic taping machines will pack the bulky products together.

After the introduction of Mr Sanath, he took us to the production site and explained to us how the product actually goes on. Everything in the process was systematic with very less idle time. Lots of skilled workers are present at the packaging area showcasing their talents. At the end of the session they gave us good send off and complimentary biscuit packets. And in the premises of Factory Outlet is there both faculty, students purchased the different varieties of biscuits.
